The University of Granada (UGR) has joined the World Alliance of Sinology and Chinese Studies Universities, an international network launched by the World Sinology Center at Beijing Language and Culture University. The UGR received its official membership certificate on 12 November during an international academic event in China.

The UGR's Vice-Rector for Internationalization, Inmaculada Marrero Rocha, and its Director for Language Policy and Internationalization of Studies, Francisca Serrano Chica, represented the University at the forum titled 'Innovation and Development of Discourse Capacity in Global Sinology and China Studies'. Held from 10 to 16 November in Shanghai, Qingdao and Nanyang, the forum brought together university leaders and specialists from various countries.

The programme covered topics including research on China, educational innovation, university cooperation and the international dissemination of knowledge. During the sessions, Inmaculada Marrero presented an overview of the development, current state and future prospects of Chinese language studies and sinology at the UGR.

This new membership places the UGR within an international network dedicated to promoting Chinese studies, academic exchange and intercultural dialogue. The alliance offers new opportunities to strengthen ties with universities and research centres in other countries and to undertake joint projects in sinology and Chinese studies.

During the event, the Director of the World Sinology Center honoured the University of Granada for promoting the study of China and its language and culture, as well as for its extensive involvement in international academic networks and its commitment to cooperation and internationalization.
