DOCTORAL PROGRAMMES

The University of Granada (UGR) is firmly committed to excellence across all of its doctoral programmes – excellence delivered by expert teaching staff with a solid scientific track record who participate in prestigious research projects at national and international level. We have long-standing experience in educating doctors and supporting candidates in producing high-quality theses with an international impact.

INFORMATION ABOUT DOCTORAL PROGRAMMES

What is a doctorate?

A doctorate is a postgraduate degree that typically follows the acquisition of a master's degree and is designed to equip candidates with the skills and competencies to conduct high-quality scientific research.

What are the admission requirements?

Generally speaking, in order to enrol on a doctoral programme you must hold a bachelor's degree issued in Spain or an equivalent qualification, and a master's degree.

International applicants must hold a degree issued in accordance with their national education systems, but do not require official recognition from the Spanish Ministry of Education (homologación), provided that the degree proves a level of training which is equivalent to that of an official master's degree (postgraduate level) in Spain and entitles you to enrol on a doctoral programme in the country of issue.

You can apply online and consult the specific admission criteria on the webpage of the doctoral programme that you are interested in: doctorados.ugr.es
